Using Spreadsheets

- This is a lecture and an interactive demonstration
 - This isn't a definitive answer – just a suggested set of methodologies
 - Using tools that you are familiar with to help “picture” the situation can lead to finding what you know and need to know
 - Family tree systems seldom can be used for this
 - I'll try to answer questions when asked

Using Spreadsheets

- This is not about spreadsheets – but is.
- Sometimes you run into a roadblock that is not easy to solve by doing family trees
- Trees require kid :: parents relationships which you might not have – or which may be very muddled
- Paper, graph paper, whiteboards, word processors, and yes – spreadsheets sometimes are a better way to go.

Using Spreadsheets

- When your goal is to sort out complex sets of facts which do not relate, make sense, or jive, you need to think about what you are trying to solve and how to display it so that you can isolate the facts that make sense.
- Sometimes times you have too many facts – Daniel Ryan or Lars Larson. You need to try and sort out the relevant facts.
- Often times, this becomes a visual process, but you also still need a way to “keep the facts straight”.
- Seldom does creating a tree or set of trees help.

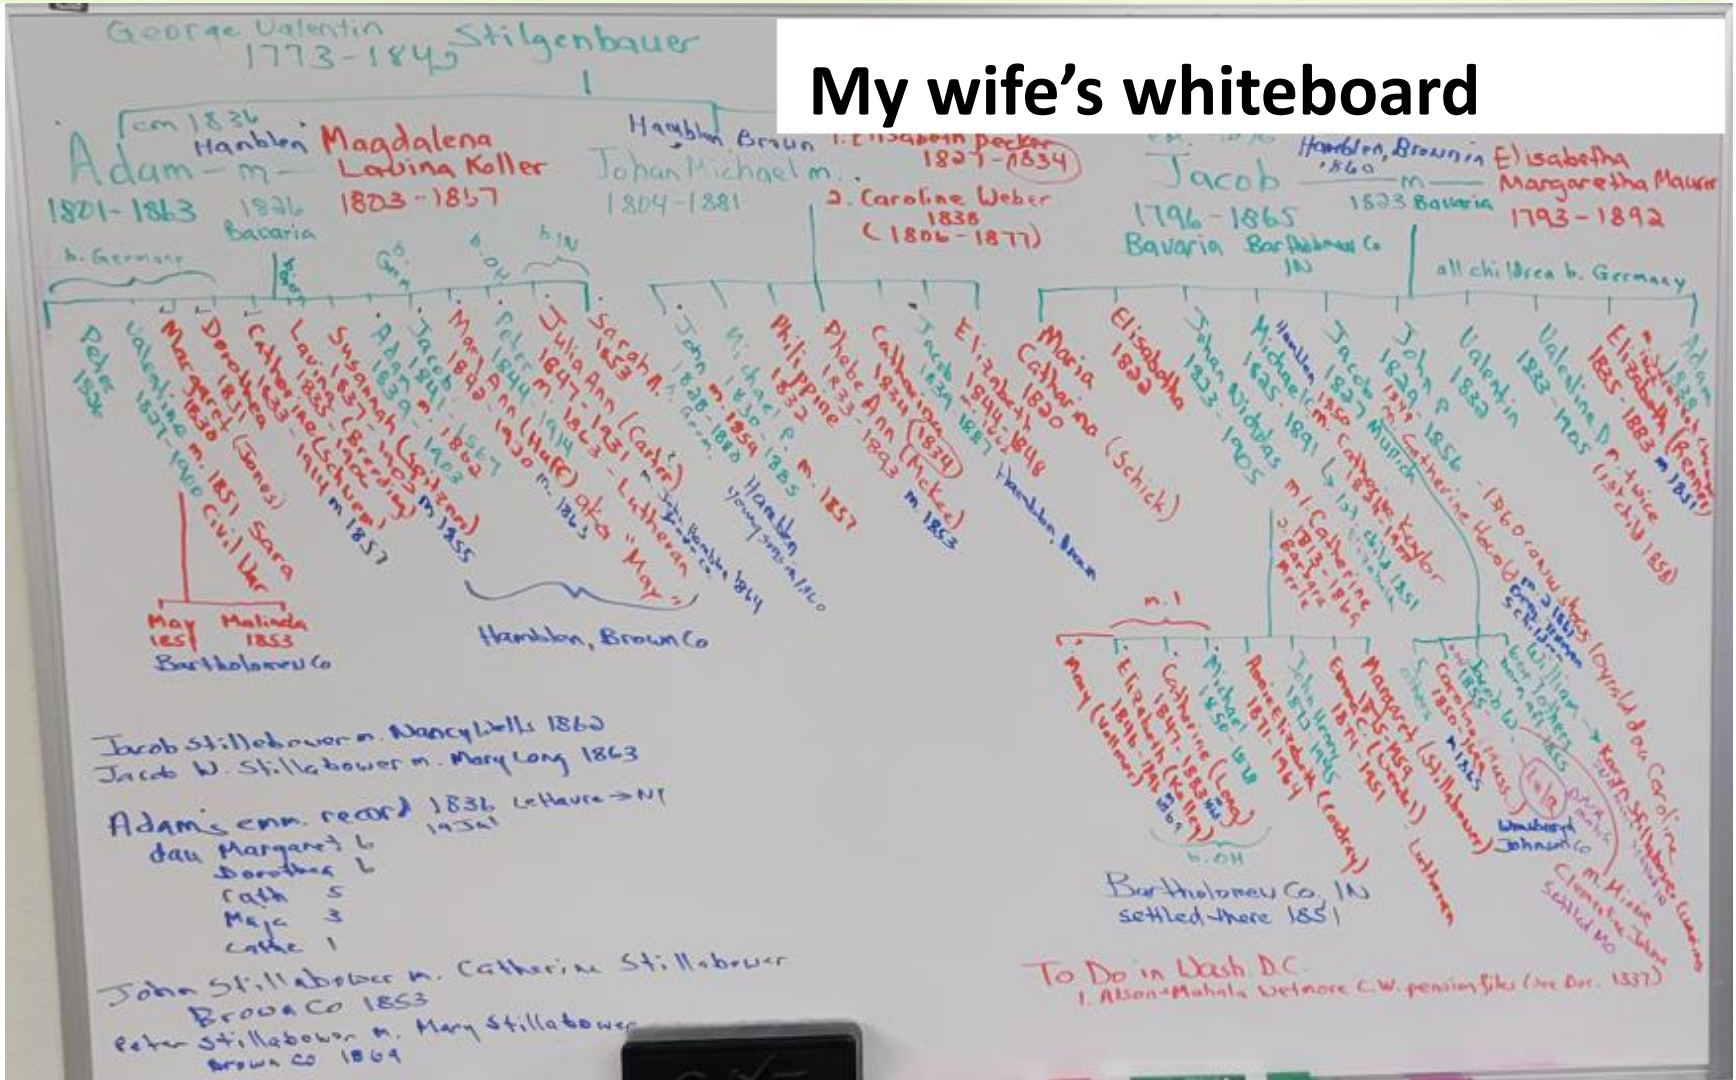

Using Spreadsheets

- Types of problems to try this on:
 - DNA Isolation
 - That German Girl ancestor
 - 3 or more possibilities for one ancestor
 - Everybody with the same last name or very common name issues
